

RAWSOME — Scripts / SOP

Lead nurture playbook · Recording-share workflow · Exported from Mission Control

Core Sequence — Recording First, Then Group Session

Lead with the spotlight recording, not the live invite. The recording is a near-zero-cost yes that delivers proof before you ask for anything big — it earns the right to invite them to the next group session. Tie the recording to a challenge they just named (mirror their words), let them watch, then invite to the live session as the next step. Keep the next session date as your urgency lever for anyone who watches but stalls.

Exception: for leads who've already attended a session (Level 2), a direct live re-invite can lead — they've felt the room, so scarcity works. Recording-first is strongest for brand-new leads.

Recording-Share SOP — the ninja hack

You're not "sending a video" — you're answering a problem the lead just named, with the recording built for it. Every recording ends on the same bridge: no problems, only patterns → a better question → Ignite ($12K to be in the room, $97 to keep it). Get the right recording to the right person so that ending lands.

The 6-step workflow (all audiences)

- 1 Celebrate + surface. One specific celebration, then one question to name their challenge in their own words. Offer nothing yet.
- 2 Match. Pick the ONE recording that mirrors what they said (table below). Name why.
- 3 Get the yes first. "Want me to send it?" A yes is a micro-commitment — don't dump the link unasked.
- 4 Send + frame. One line on what to watch for, tied to their challenge. Ask them to reply once watched.
- 5 Follow the outro into the offer. The recording already introduced Ignite. Bridge: "That co-pilot he mentioned — want the link?" Then invite to the next live group session.
- 6 Log it. Update the journey stage (Recording Sent → Replied → Offered $97) and note the recording title in Mission Control.

Match the recording to their need

If the lead's challenge sounds like...	Send this recording
Rapport / trust isn't landing in their business	#1 Six Human Needs
Self-doubt — "maybe I'm not cut out for this"	#2 Belief Became Truth
Busy every day but nothing moves — overwhelm	#3 Overwhelm → Clarity
Says yes when they mean no — resentment	#4 The People-Pleaser Pattern
Emotional reactivity / triggers	#5 Wheel of Emotions / #6 Hidden Gift in Every Trigger
Stuck being who others want them to be	#8 Becoming More of Who You Are
Gratitude practice that never sticks	#9 From Blessing to Becoming
Regret / wants a fresh start	#10 Day One: The 10-Year Regret
No time / life feels empty	#11 More Life in Your Life
Skeptical — wants proof it works	#12 Dott's / #13 Andrew's Breakthrough (live demos)

Three audience flows — same spine, different framing

RAWSOME 1000 — warm leads → $97 Ignite

- Goal: recording → next group session → $97 Ignite offer.
- Lead with the recording FIRST (proof before the invite) — new leads especially.
- Attended once before? Re-invite to the next group session first, recording as the sweetener.
- Let the outro do the selling — you just hand them the link.

Super VA Affiliate — coaches nurtured to refer / hire VAs

- Frame the recording as “the caliber of what our world produces.”
- Match to a business/craft recording (#1–#3) — they think in systems.
- Bridge to Super VA (“want to see how we run this engine?”), not the $97 consumer offer.
- Goal: recording builds trust → conversation about referring or hiring through Super VA.

P1 Affiliate / Platinum coaches — the hack to teach

- Two uses: (a) they share recordings with THEIR audiences, (b) they learn THIS flow to run it.
- Lead with a live demo (#12 Dott / #13 Andrew) — coaches want proof of method.
- Position Ignite as the tool their clients keep for $97 between sessions.
- Goal (Kenny's Aug outcome): P1 coaches adopt this exact share-flow as their own SOP.

Lead Nurture Scripts — by level

Level 1 — Brand New Leads

Entry via Facebook post · Celebrate them first · What they value → the recording

Goal: Post the video content first. When someone engages, open with ONE specific celebration, find out what landed for them and their challenge, then offer the recording as the answer. (Send steps one at a time.)

Step 1 Celebrate + what landed for them

Hey [Name]! Saw you liked my post, and I also noticed [one specific real thing on their profile/post]. That's so good, congrats ■■

Curious, what was it about that post that spoke to you?

■ One real, specific celebration. Never 'love your content.' Make them feel seen. Wait for their reply.

Step 2 Their challenge + how to help

Ah I get that. Is that something you're working through right now, in your coaching or personally? What's the one thing you'd love to break through?

■ One question at a time. Let them name it in their own words.

Step 3 Offer recording (tie to their words)

Okay this is kinda perfect. That post came from a session I recorded — someone breaking through this exact thing you just mentioned, just from the right questions. Want me to send it? I think it'll hit home.

■ Recording FIRST. Mirror the exact challenge they named so it feels made for them, not a broadcast.

Step 4 After they watch → invite to next group session

So glad that landed! ■ The live version of this happens in our group sessions — same kind of breakthrough, but in real time where I can do it with you. I've got one coming up soon. Want me to save you a spot?

■ Only invite AFTER they've watched and reacted warmly. The recording earned this ask. If they stall, the next session date is your urgency lever — naming the upcoming date gives a passive watcher a reason to move.

■ Kenny's Rules

- Only reach out to people who actually engaged with the post.
- Always open with one specific celebration.
- Lead with the recording, NOT the live invite. It's a near-zero-cost yes that delivers proof first.
- Mirror their named challenge when you offer the recording — make it feel personal.
- Invite to the next group session only after they watch and respond warmly. Use the session date as the urgency lever for stallers.

Level 2 — Attended Once Before

Celebrate their last-call moment · What they valued + how to support more → recording

Goal: They've felt the room. Celebrate one specific thing from the last call, ask what they valued most and how you can support them even more, then bridge into the recording and the July 25th seat.

Step 1 Celebrate their last-call moment

Hey [Name]! Been thinking about you since the last call. I loved [one specific thing they shared or their aha moment]. So good, celebrate you for that ■■

■ A real moment from the last call. Shows you were paying attention to them.

Step 2 What they valued + how to support more

What stood out most for you from the call? I ask because I want to support you even more with exactly that.

Is there something I could go deeper on that would help you even more right now?

■ Their answer is the bridge into the recording. One question at a time.

Step 3 Invite to next group session (live-first for returners)

You've already felt how these work, so you know the value first-hand. I've got a live group session coming up — this is your chance to go deeper on exactly what you just said. Want me to save you a seat?

■ EXCEPTION to recording-first: returners have felt the room, so scarcity and a direct live re-invite hit harder. Lead with the group session invite here.

Step 4 Recording as the sweetener / for stallers

And so you've got something in the meantime — I recorded a full session and this time I show what's behind it too. Feels spot on for what you just shared. Want me to send it?

■ Use the recording to sweeten the yes, or to re-engage if they don't commit to the group session. The behind-the-scenes reveal is the fresh value for returners.

■ Kenny's Rules

- Open with a specific celebration from the last call.
- Lead with what they valued and how you can help more, before offering anything.
- Returners are the exception: a direct group-session re-invite can lead, since they already know the value.
- The behind-the-scenes reveal is the fresh value for returners — use the recording to sweeten or re-engage.
- Tie everything to their own words from the last call.

Level 3 — Invited 3–4x, Never Attends

Zero pressure · Celebrate them · Tailor-fit the next session to their needs

Goal: Stop generic invites. Open with warmth and one specific celebration. Ask what they'd most want to break through so you can tailor-fit the next session to them. Even if they don't attend, learning their real needs is the win.

Step 1 Celebrate them (one specific thing)

Hey [Name]! No pressure at all, I know timing's been tricky. Been thinking about you, and I saw [one specific real thing on their profile/post], so good ■■

■ One specific celebration first, so it feels like appreciation, not another ask.

Step 2 The bespoke ask

This month I'm building something special and I want it shaped around real people. If you could break through one thing right now, in your coaching or a relationship, what would it be?

■ Make them feel 'Kenny is tailoring this for ME.'

Step 3 Tailor-fit + offer recording + soft re-invite

Thanks for that, that helps me a lot, I want to tailor-fit the next session to what you need most. Funny enough, I've already got a recording that's almost exactly this. Want me to send it? And if it clicks, cool if I loop you into the next one?

■

■ Ask permission to re-invite. Keep the door open, no pressure.

■ Kenny's Rules

- Never send another plain 'come to the session' invite. It's been tried 3–4×.
- Make it about them and tailoring the next session to their needs.
- The insight is the win. You learn their real needs even if they never join.
- Ask permission to re-invite. Keep the door open, no pressure.